Beauties of orthography:—"Did you ever hear a Cockney spell saloon? Sez he: There's a hees an' a hay an' a hell, two hoes an' a hen!"

The young man who dropped a ten-cent piece down his sweet-heart's neck, and called her a dime savings bank, had a dividend declared on the spot.

They had been at the masquerade, when she recognized him at once. "Was it the loud beating of your heart, my darling, that told you I was near?" murmured he. "Oh, no," she replied, "I recognized your crooked legs."

He was making a call, and they were talking of literature. "The Pilgrim's Progress," she remarked, "always seems to me painful.—Of course you are familiar with Bunyan?"

He said he "had one on each foot and they bothered him a good deal."

"Bob Brown, did you say that my father had not as much sense as Billy Smith's little yellow dog?"

"No, I never said any such thing. I never said that your father had not as much sense as Billy Smith's yellow dog. All I said was that Billy Smith's little yellow dog had more sense than your father; that's all I ever said."

A youth who attended a Scotch revival meeting for the fun of the thing, ironically inquired of the minister "whether he could work a miracle or not?"

The young man's curiosity was fully satisfied by the minister kicking him out of the church, with the malediction, "We cannot work miracles but we can cast out devils!"

The reason given by the colored man for not going too near the hind legs of a famous roan mule was so satisfactory that we can afford to adopt it as an excuse for not doing many other things: "De reason," he said, "why I nebber 'proach dat roan' mule from de reah is dat I'm too fond of my family an' don't belong to no church, nudder."

An Artless Infant.

The following is told of a well-known "beauty lady" who is happy in the possession of a little girl, about five years old, almost as pretty as her mother: Not long ago an elderly, and highly respectable gentleman made an afternoon call, and, as elderly gentlemen often do, he took up the child and kissed her.

"You must not do that," said the child struggling. "I am a respectable married woman!"

"What do you mean, my dear?" asked the astonished visitor.

"Oh, that's what mamma always says when gentlemen kiss her!" replied the artless infant.

A Disgusted Dutchman.

There was a slight blaze on the roof of a house on Russell street, a few days ago, and when the insurance adjusters went up to make their survey they found that two dollars would cover the loss.

"Two tollar," exclaimed the owner, when he heard the decision, "I can take no two tollar."

"But you see for yourself that a dozen shingles and an hour's work will make good all damages."

"Shentlemen's you doan' put me off like dot. When my wife finds dot we vhas on fire she screams boleecs and murder and falls down stairs. Would you let your wife fall down stairs for dot sum? If so, I goes home mit yer and sees der fun."

"We do not insure husbands and wives, but buildings," was the reply.

"I knows dat, but mein eldest poy he run der fire-pox and falls a picket fence oafar and breaks his good clothes all to biecc. Two tollar! Dot doan' bay for me coming here."

"Yes, but we can only pay for actual damages."

"Dot's all I vphant. Who stole my dog when my house vhas on fire? Dot dog ish gone, and he vhas ten tollars wort."

"We didn't insure your dog."

"Und mebbe you don't insure dem poy who sat on der fence and sang out: 'Dot old Dutchman's ret nose has sot his house on fire!' Do you tink me dot sass for two tollar? Und yhen der firemens games here, dey break mein clothes-line down mit der ladders, and dey spill wasser all oafar my garpets.—Two tollar! Vhell, vhell! you go right avhay from here and I dake dot olt insurance bolicy und steps him inter der mut, py shiniay."
