

Fundeigner's Adventure in a Well.

George Fundeigner, a Williamsburgh Garman, found himself in Paterson on Saturday night last week, without money. As it threatened to rain, he rambled about the suburbs, and came across what he supposed to be an old shed back of the Orphan Asylum at Sandy Hill. It proved to be a long unused well, about 20 feet deep, and Mr. Fundeigner suddenly found himself at the bottom of it. Being unable to get out, he yelled for assistance. The old well is near a grave yard, and several persons who heard the yells on that stormy night ran home convinced that it was something supernatural. One woman rushed into her kitchen pale as death, throwing her market basket down on the floor, vowed to her husband that she would never as long as she lived, pass that grave-yard at night. Finally some one who heard Fundeigner's groans informed Policeman Bailey, who, with the assistance of some neighbors and a clothes line, pulled Fundeigner out. He was considerable bruised and was taken to the almshouse, where he remains. Fortunately there was very little water in the well, but the bottom was covered with jagged stones.

A Narrow Escape.

ALTOONA, Pa., May 18. — One of the most miraculous escapes in the history of railroading happened here this evening to the Cincinnati Express, due at 9 o'clock. In coming down the mountain, the engine lost control of the train by the automatic air-brakes becoming unmanageable to hold the large train of twelve cars. The engineer whistled "down brakes" and came into the depot at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, whistling for clear track, which had the effect of bringing thousands to the depot to see steaming through at a terrible rate, but fortunately the engine which was in waiting at the Ninth-street crossing was run into and stopped the runaway train. Three engines were disabled, the cylinder heads being blown out. The passengers were terribly scared. Never since Altoona was a railroad centre, has an accident occurred which created such a panic. The engineers, Aaron Dougherty and George Cassidy, deserve special mention and credit for remaining at their posts. No persons were hurt.

A Trick Shown Up.

One of the big "cards of the circus which visited Salem last month was the shooting of a woman out of a cannon—"a living cannon ball," as the posters said. Well, they met with a mishap while performing the feat in a town in Maryland, last week. When this feat (?) was about to be performed the spring in the big wooden cannon was sprung before the powder which makes the report was touched. The consequence was that about the time the performer ejected from the gun reached the trapeze, the powder went off with a "boom," thereby showing up the trick to the audience.—Salem Standard.

Anxious to Die.

READING, May 17.—Quite a strange case of voluntary starvation is reported from Amity township, this county. The person is Miss Anna Halloway, aged 19, daughter of the late John B. Halloway, formerly a leading citizen of that section. Although living in a very pleasant and pretty country home, and of a family comfortably situated, the young woman persistently refuses to partake of nourishing food and is slowly wasting away, gradually sinking under her voluntary slow starvation. All her nearest and dearest friends cannot change her from her seemingly earnest determination to starve herself to death.

Nearly Perished in a Box Car.

When the eastern-bound freight train arrived at Winnemucca, Nev., on Monday, last week, a man cried from one of the box cars: "For God's sake, let me out!" The car was burst open, and the individual who emerged was found to be nearly dying with hunger and thirst. He was apparently one who belonged to the upper class of society. He said that he got drunk in San Francisco on Friday, and when he came to his senses, he found he was locked up in the car. Farther than that he could give no explanation.

Beat at his own Game.

Scott rode fifty miles, in New Mexico, to oblige a friend by murdering Donovan. He found Donovan in a saloon, gained an introduction, and sat down to play an ostensibly amicable game of cards. But Donovan was an observant man, and saw that his companion was more excited than the game warranted; so he slyly drew his his revolver, cocked it, and laid it across his knees under the table. Consequently, when Scotts cried, "I've come to kill you," and attempted to shoot, he received a death wound instead of giving one.

Great Fire in Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 17.—The most destructive conflagration seen in this city for years, broke out this morning at 10 o'clock in the large paint, oil and glass house of Warren Brothers, corner of Church and College Streets. The fire commenced in the cellar, where several hundred barrels of paint and oil were stored, and was not discovered until it worked its way to first floor. Thirty buildings were burned before the fire was under control, causing a loss of half a million dollars.
