"A cynical man says his wife is only half like a telescope. He can draw her out, but he says he can't shut her up."

"Papa," said an inquisitive boy, "this morning the dominie prayed for more rain and this afternoon Deacon Bixby prayed for dry weather to get his hay in. Now if the Lord loves the Deacon and the dominie just the same, what do you suppose He'll do about it?"
"My son," answered the old gentleman sternly, "whenever you want to ask foolish questions go to your mother; don't come to me."

Papa was at his toilet, and his youngest daughter, aged six, who found her way into his dressing room, was watching the progress of his shining razor with the keenest interest. Presently her elder sister came in search of her, urging, "You must come away, May, while papa is shaving." "I guess not," retorted the little wit, quickly.
"I can stay, 'cause I'm his little shaver!"

They were talking about ferocious animals, when a Wicklow magistrate remarked: "When I was in danger from a Kerry bull, I sat down and stared him full in the face."

"How did it answer?" queried the breathless bystanders.

"Excellent! The bull didn't offer to touch me."

"Very remarkable—very curious!— How do you account for it?"

"Well, sometimes I've thought it was because I sat down on the top branch of a very tall tree," said the magistrate.

"Is that an Alderney cow?" the young man from town asked old Mr.
Thistlepod, out on the Agency road.— The old man is a little near-sighted in his hearing, and he looked at the youth in amazement. "Wall, he replied, "she ain't so all-fired elderly, only two years old last spring. What might be your idea of an old cow, young man?" But the young man spoke not, neither did he smile, but he looked away off down the road with the yearning expression of a man who has been drafted but doesn't want to go.

How Sal "Disgraced the Family."

A traveler in the state of Illinois some years ago came to a long log hut on the prairie near Cairo, and there halted. He went into the house. It was a wretched affair—an empty packing box for a table, while two or three chairs and disagreeable stools graced the reception room, the dark walls of which were ornamented by a display of tin-ware and a broken shelf article or two. The woman was crying in one corner, and the man, with tears in his eyes and a pipe in his mouth, on a stool, with his sorrowful looking head supported by the palms of his hands. Not a word greeted the interloper.

"Well," said he, "you seem to be in awful trouble here. What's up?"

"Ah, we are almost crazed, neighbor," said the woman; and we ain't got the patience to see folks now."

"That's all right," said the stranger not much taken aback by the polite rebuff; "but can I be of any service to you in all this trouble?"

"Well, we've lost our gal; our Sal's gone off and left us," said the old man in tones of deep despair.

"Ah, do you know what induced her to leave you?" remarked the new arrival.

"Well, we can't say, neighbor, as how she's so far lost as to be induced, but then she's gone and disgraced us," remarked the afflicted father.

"Yes, stranger, and—not as I should say it as is her mother—but there warn't a potter gal in all the west than our Sal. She's gone and brought ruin on her own head now," followed the stricken mother.

"Who has gone off with her?" inquired the visitor.

"Well there's the trouble. The gal could have done well, and might have married Martin Kehoe, a capital shoemaker, who although he has but one eye, plays the flute in a lively manner, and earns a good living. Then, look, what a life she has deserted; she was here surrounded by all the luxury in the country," said the father.

"Yes, who knows what poor Sal will have to eat, drink and wear now?" groaned the old woman.

"And who is the fellow who has taken her into such misery?"

"Why, she's gone off and got married to a critter called an editor, as lives in the village, and the Lord only knows how he's to earn a living."
