A Scene Not on the Bills.

Those who attended the circus last evening were treated to a spectacle not down on the bills. Before the performance began a great commotion was heard in or near the small tent back of the entrance through which the cavalcade of knights, tumblers and elephants, dogs and bareback riders are wont to emerge in all their glitter and splendor. Two or three elephants were making a big noise, as if they were mad about something, but people thought perhaps the baggage smasher had got hold of their trunks and waited for the show to open heedless of danger. Soon, however, the tent on the side of the entrance between that and the row of reserved seats was seen to rise, and an enraged elephant came tooting and unannounced into the amphitheatre. He was closely followed by a keeper, who very unnecessarily shouted, "Let him alone." Without pausing an instant he made straight for the opposite side of the tent, tearing up the stakes and taking the ropes with him as he entered the ring. The seats on the west side were filled with men, women and children, who were terrified when they saw that the elephant was coming through, and they jumped rolled and tumbled in frantic efforts to get out of the way. Luckily the elephant became entangled in the chain or rope as he emerged from the ring on that side, and his progress was checked for a moment, so that the people escaped in time. Reaching the seats, he pushed along, smashing a tier at a time as long as he could step on them, and then seizing the others with his trunk, he viciously whirled them over his head, making as opening clean through to the open air on the west side of the big tent. He then rushed off on to the open prairie south, where he was with difficulty recaptured and chained up,-Ionia (Mich) Son-

Carolina's Five Dollar Gold Piece.

An Alabama editor says: A few days ngo a rare $5 gold coin was handed us by Mr L. Breazeale, of Calera, for inspection. Said coin was about the size of a silver quarte -a shade thicker, the color of "old gold," and was inscribed as follows: Oa one side, "Carolina gold, August 1st, 1843. 140 c. 20 carats." On the other side, "C. Betchler. At Rutherfe. 5 dollars. The history of the coin, as we learned from Mr. Breazeale, is about this: A gentleman by the name of Beltcher owned and worked a gold mine in North Carolina about the date shown on said coin. At this time transportation facilities were not so good as they have become since, and the means of communication were also much more limited. On this account Betchler found some difficulty in getting his gold-dust to market and he formed the idea of coining it himself. Not wishing to infringe upon the government, or to be considered a counterfeiter, he ascertained the exact amount of gold contained in the different varieties of gold coins coined by the government, made his own dies, and coined his gold-dust in his own name, stamping his own name and the value upon each, as shown above .-This was known throughout North Carolina as Betchler's gold, and passed among the people of that State, and elsewhere where the facts were known, as readily as the gold coins that bore the stamp of the govnment mints. The $5 coin we saw, and which Mr. B. had in his possession, is a beautiful one, and is well worthy a place in the cabinet of a numismatologist.

Carry The News.

Mr. John Etzensperger, manufacturing Jeweler of Noth Attleboro', Mass., lately communicated to us the following: I suffered so much with pains in my arm, that at times I was completely helpiess. I used that incomparable remedy St. Jacobs Oil, and was completely cured as if by magic.

A Railroad Collision.

On Sunday evening, an accident, the cause of which was somewhat similar to that of the terrible catastrophe at May's Landing, a year ago, but fortunately without its terrible list of killed and wounded as an accompaniment, occurred Sunday night at 8.30 o'clock on the Pennsylvania Railroad a half mile east of (Overbrook Station.) The Chicago day express coming east was blocked to wait for the West Chester accommodation train to pass, when the St. Louis express came dashing along and its engine was driven with tervific force, the whole length of the boiler, into the rear car of the stationary train, demolishing it almost completely. The shock splintered and damaged every car in the standing train.

The Chicago train was made up of four ordinary passenger cars and the private Poliman car of General Manager Frank Thomson, which was the fifth and last car. It was empty at the time of the accident, the two colored porters having gone into the forward part of the train a few moments before. The first four cars were filled with passengers, all of whom escaped without serious injury. Mauager Thomson was not in his car at the time of the collision.

Just how such an accident could have occurred in a straight line of track is a mystery, and can only be explained on the ground that the engineer of the St. Louis section did not see the flag, or else was deceived as to its color. G. W. Hunter, the proprietor of the Lochiel House, Harrisburg, who was in the fourth car of the Chiesgo train, was injured about the head and face by being thrown against a mirror, and one gentleman in the St. Louis suffered a contusion of the arm and chest
