Bookstores Ban Adult Magazines

CPS A four-day sit-in convinced St. Cloud State University officials to stop selling Penthouse, Playboy and Playgirl magazines at the campus bookstore.

Students and faculty members voted to ban the sale the last week of January as members of two groups--the Women's Equality Group and Women for Social Justice--protested for four days at the campus student center's newsstand, calling the magazines degrading to women.

Similarly, the newsstand at Michigan Tech's Memorial Union stopped selling the magazines after renovations on the building were finished last fall.

The University Co-op at the University of Texas, however, resumed selling the sex magazines in September after the co-op, fearing children and teenagers who attended various camps on campus during the summer might see the publications, voted to ban them in June.

Moreover, only 14 people showed up at an October hearing to decide to stop selling the magazines at the University of Minnesota's West Bank Union.

In general, however, it has been a rocky year for Playboy on American campuses. Arizona State University women's groups denounced an appearance by magazine model Jessica Hahn at a business school fundraiser, calling it "especially offensive" to students "who consider themselves serious scholars."

The presidents of six Catholic colleges last fall issued statements denouncing Playboy's plans to ask their female students to pose unclothed for the magazine.

Boston College President Rev. J. Donald Monan called Playboy "symbolic of the exploitation of American women."

Only one Providence College woman showed up to interview when photographer David Mecey invited students in late October.

And in November, Dartmouth college officials returned a $5,000 Playboy grant in the name of a Dartmouth football player. "It is the college's view that many on campus find the magazine demeaning," said spokesman Alex Huppe. "At a time when we are actively trying to recruit women, we felt we could not keep the money."

Here at Behrend, Robert Mac Donald, manager of the bookstore, reports he has no plans to sell adult magazines.

"I don't think it's appropriate (here). If somebody wants that badly enough, they don't have to go far," said Mac Donald.

He noted that due to space limitations, he has only recently begun to sell any magazines, but now carries a variety of publications.

weekend in 1960. Shortly afterwards, he became the SNCC's communications director.

Bond left Morehouse one semester short of graduation in 1961 to join the staff of a new weekly newspaper, "The Atlanta Inquirer." He later became the paper's managing editor. Bond returned to Morehouse in 1971 and graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in English.

Bond was first elected in 1965 to a one-year term in the Georgia House of Representatives in an election following a court-ordered re-apportionment of the legislature. But members of the House voted not to seat him because of his outspoken opposition to the Vietnam War.

Bond went on to win a second election in 1966, and again the Georgia House voted to bar him from membership. He won a third election, this time for a two-year term, in November 1966, and in December, the United States Supreme Court ruled unanimously that the Georgia House had violated Bond's rights in refusing him his seat.

He was elected to the State Senate in 1974. When he left the office in January 1987, Bond had been elected to public office more times than any other Black Georgian. He had served four terms in the House and six terms in the Senate, ending his tenure only when an unsuccessful congressional race in 1986 prevented him from seeking re-election to the Senate.

A Natural High

of work one does feels like playing and not work at all. The person works for self fulfillment and not for the money.

A "social communication high" is achieved through personal communication and connection between two people. In this instance one picks up on another's excitement and energy. Social communication is an extremely powerful high, tied closely with an emotional high.

An "emotional high" can be associated with the excitement of falling in love and finding someone to really communicate with and share ourselves, explained Weiner. There are also negative emotions where there is a physical release of anger. The high in a negative emotion is found afterwards with the sensation of being fully relaxed.

Finally, a "spiritual high" is not necessarily religious. It is the sense of universal energy we tap into to locate the spirit inside of us. It is also the process of going inside of oneself and feeling the actual core of who we are. The spiritual high cannot be neglected and must be attended to.

It is important to have a balance maintained while experiencing these highs. As Weiner states, "If you put too much effort in your greatest strength, it will become your greatest weakness." All the highs are similar regardless of cause and Weiner also adds that the sensation of getting high without the use of drugs is a very positive experience. For anyone interested in learning more about getting high naturally, Weiner suggests a book entitled "Living in the Light" by Shakti Gawain.
