Behrend's Top of the Hill Club has been collecting Campbell's Soup labels and Giant Eagle cash register receipts to benefit Diehl Elementary School.

According to TOTH president Tom Wilkinson, the club hopes to collect enough cash register receipts to earn an Apple computer for Diehl, Behrend's adopted school.

Students may place the receipts and labels in the boxes decorated by Diehl students. Boxes are located in the Reed Building, the Computer Center, the Nick Building, and the laundry rooms. More boxes will be available soon.

The Top of the Hill Club is a student organization for non-traditional (23 and older) students.

exceeded the administration's target of 2500 by approximately 200, limited classroom availability still posed problems.

"The resources of the college are both physical and human," said Schenker, "We have three primary resources that we must get to come together. The classrooms, which are a physical resource; the instructors, which are a human resource; and the students, who are the human client resource. The objective when you're putting a schedule together is to keep in mind that you have a limited physical resource in the classrooms and a limited human resource in the instructor end of it, based on a budget. Sometimes it's like trying to fit six or seven fingers into a five fingered glove."

More Behrend majors will be coming under enrollment restrictions, some as early as fall of this year, in order to control student population. Other steps must be taken to alleviate class space problems.

"Right now, Behrend is locked tight," said Schenker. "We not only have high use of classrooms, but a secondary figure we look at and that's called your seating station. Every desk in your classroom is called a seating station or a student station. That particular student station should never be utilized at 100 percent, yet there are many times when we utilize our classrooms at 100 percent with the student station use being very, very high," he said.

"That is a constraint that we here at Behrend are trying to address, with Dr. Lilley's leadership, and securing the new academic complex and library building," he added.

Until additional classroom space can be provided, class scheduling will go on much the same as it had in the recent past. As new buildings are constructed, future Penn State Behrend students should realize increased ease in scheduling class times that fit their particular lifestyles and desires.

Assault Reported in Perry Hall

An assault in Perry hall was reported on March 11. According to Police and Safety Officer Todd Allen, student Erik Hertzog reported that he and some friends were walking into the Perry lobby when an unknown black male punched him repeatedly in the face. Hertzog fled the scene with three or four black males following. Lori Michalowski tried to intervene and was punched twice in the face. The assailants were gone when Allen arrived.

In other business, Officer Douglas has been involved in an ongoing investigation of the indecent harassment of a female on campus.

On March 10 the department investigated the theft of a sign and newspaper tube and the destruction of a mailbox belonging to P.J. Brown, assistant dean of student affairs.

Marijuana use in the Lawrence classroom was reported by maintenance worker Berry Flemming on March 8. Two other incidents of marijuana use in the classroom were reported previously.

On March 13 Officer Sanders heard loud noises coming from the quad area while patrolling the apartment area. Upon investigating, he discovered a group of students drinking beer around a propane grill. One individual was arrested for disorderly conduct and the others were warned of the open fire policy.

Officer Allen investigated the vandalism of a Pepsi machine in the Turnbull building. The machine is owned by Erie Botling Co.

The department also reported many thefts of wallets in Erie Hall, continued vandalism of bulletin boards in Lawrence Hall, and theft of a maintenance building sign.

Women's Month

by Jennifer Rose
Collegian Staff Writer

D.C. on April 9.

March has been named Women's Month to designate the rights of women and their freedom in America. Several events at Behrend have emphasized the concern about women's rights.

Bernice Sander spoke on Wednesday, March 8, about the problems of sexual harassment. Shirley Chisholm spoke on Jan. 19 about women in politics. Currently the library has a display of books dealing with women's issues.

Women from Behrend's organization Women Today will be participating in a national women's march in Washington

According to some members of Women Today, more should be done on campus to dispel discriminating views of women. "It is very disappointing that the University doesn't see the need to promote Women's Month to the same extent as Black History Month. They don't feel that problems of being a woman are as much of a challenge as being black," said Maurica George, the Secretary/Treasurer of Women Today.

According to George, the members of "Women Today" would like to see more done on this campus for the rights of women. Just as many programs should be focused on women as on other minorities, she said.

Military Ball

by Lori Beals

The guest speaker for the evening, Colonel John E. McAllister, the Chief of Staff of the 99th U.S. Army Reserve Command, gave an after-dinner speech about leadership. Then the Colors were retrieved and DJ Mike Reno played music for dancing.

Formally dressed couples swirled to the dance music during the Military Ball on Fri. March 10. The Ball, which was held at the Maennerchor Club in Erie, began with an entrance up a staircase and under a sabre arch provided by Behrend's Drill Team. At 7:30 a receiving line started, then the Drill Team posted the Colors and dinner began.

Almost 100 people attended the Ball, including people from Behrend College, the community and various military units from around the area.
