SGA President Stan Washington looks back on his first semester in office

by Cristin Hayes
Collegian Staff Writer

The Student Government Association's greatest accomplishment this year has been the restoration of the Wintergreen Cafe, according to SGA President Stan Washington.

SGA senators took the voice of Behrend students to Administrators and encouraged the Cafe to institute a number of price reforms, according to Washington.

Washington was interviewed by The Collegian and was asked for his views on his first semester in office.

Washington said he came into office hoping to bring diversity and unity into SGA.

After three months, Washington feels he has accomplished those goals - at least in part. Washington explained he would like to see senators spreading these ideas to other students.

Of his goal to unite SGA senators to work together, Washington said, "It was rough at first. There were a lot of wrinkles to iron out."

Now, Washington feels the senators are more involved in the organization than in previous years.

"This semester alone, SGA has accomplished more as a group than all last year," said Washington.

Theft by deception cases reported

by Carol Mandera
Collegian Staff Writer

Three cases involving theft by deception were reported to the Department of Police and Safety on November 30. Initial reports indicate that in each case, false student identification was used to secure a loan.

According to Officer Paul Douglas, an unknown person received a $100 Bernreuter Emergency Loan from the Financial Aid Office on October 26. The crime was discovered during collection efforts, and campus police are investigating.

Two loans, each valued at $40, were obtained from the Rub Desk in the same manner. Douglas reported that the loans granted on November 2 and November 21.

Douglas further indicated that the department considers the two cases to be related, even though two different people were involved, because the same false student identification was used.

A stereo valued at $200 was stolen from a student's vehicle while it was parked in C Lot on November 30. The student told police he believed he had locked his car. When he returned the stereo which had been mounted on a removable tray, was missing and the car was locked.

Douglas said that officers found no evidence of forced entry and no additional damage to the vehicle. Police are continuing the investigation.

Icy road conditions at the intersection of Station Road and the main entrance of the campus contributed to two, related accidents on November 29.

Douglas reported that a vehicle driven by a student entering the campus from Station Road slid into a car stopped in the main drive at the stop sign.

The drivers left the vehicles at the scene and reported the accident to the department. When they returned, they discovered that the car hit the first time had been hit again by another driver attempting to enter the campus. Douglas reported that there were no injuries in either of the accidents.

The Behrend Bookstore turned four cases involving bad checks over to the campus police for further action on November 29. Douglas said the department has contacted three of the students involved and is still trying to contact the fourth. Charges and/or referrals to the Student Disciplinary Board are pending in all four cases.

A male student was referred on November 29 after he drove his vehicle across the grassy area along the main drive. Douglas reported the student was taking a short cut to leave the campus.

A second male student was referred on November 20 for disorder by conduct. According to Douglas, the student was shouting obscenities at officers after he was asked to move his illegally parked vehicle.
