King and Queen of Snow Ball Dance crowned Saturday

Unseasonable weather hurts Winterfest activities

by Cristin Hayes Collegian Staff Writer

Julie Buckler and Brad McWilliams were crowned Queen and King of the Snow Ball Dance on Saturday, February 3.

Buckler is in her fourth semester and is majoring in Secondary Education. McWilliams is a fifth semester Business major.

"I had an excellent time. I was really impressed with the quality of the dance and wouldn't be surprised if it became an annual thing," said the newly crowned Buckler.

The dance was attended by about 200 students and faculty members. Guests were able to dance from 10 pm to 2 am to a video DJ, and a casino area was available in the Wintergreen Cafe. The Wintergarden, decorated in red and silver, was the romantic backdrop for the Snow Ball. Food was provided by Housing and Food Services.

"It went wonderfully. There were lots of people and everyone had a good time," commented Co-Chairperson Vicky Kohlmeyer.

"It went better than expected and there were no problems. I hope everyone had a good time," said Phoebe Bonfardine, dance Co-Chairperson.

However, the Winterfest Activities were not as successful. Because of poor weather conditons, most of the activities were unable to take place.

NAACP leader addresses "bright and dark" days ahead

(continued from page 1) which a college student stayed home to watch television instead of going to class. "We have spent too much time trying to get into class," said Hooks. He encouraged the mostly collegeaged audience to go to class for "active learning." Hooks also suggested that college students be active in tutoring younger children.

As for the high pregnancy rate among young black women, Hooks commented it is a great problem which he viewed as crippling his race. Hooks suggested that black women be temperate.

At the end of the end of the program, Hooks addressed a question from the audience concerning Washington's Mayor Barry, who was arrested for possessing and using drugs.

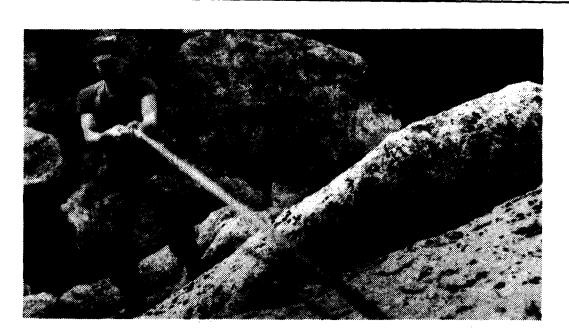

"I don't condone anybody

using drugs," said Hooks.

However, Hooks stated that he believes Berry is innocent and that he was caught by "illegal means."

In the future Hooks plans to work for a new way of registering voters. He had lobbied for a bill that would automatically register anyone who bought a new car, but it was defeated.
