

Twelve from Behrend in Gulf

And the rockets' red glare: A Tomahawk cruise missile launch lights the night sky and the deck of the USS Wisconsin during an early morning attack on Iraq. The Wisconsin has launched more than 100 Tomakawks against Iraqi positions. (AP)

Hahn says ground war may be costly

by Mark Owens
The Collegian

While the first days of the war have been relatively smooth, the honeymoon may be over for U.S. forces and their allies and officials at home if and when a ground war develops, according to Dr. Peter Hahn, associate professor of history at Behrend and noted Middle East expert.

"The war is turning out better than I expected before it began," said Hahn. "The U.S. has had a couple of fortunate developments

Anderson predicts Hussein's fate

by Floyd J. Cslr
The Collegian

"We will give him to the Saudis. They will have a trial... and they will lop Saddam's head off."

That prediction by Jack Anderson, a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist and nationally syndicated columnist, was made to a near-capacity audience in Eric Hall Tuesday night as he addressed the war in the Gulf.

Known for his columns that reveal government secrets and news-making information, Anderson spoke on "The News Behind The News."

Based on reliable sources in Saudi Arabia, Anderson said the United States "does not want to kill Saddam Hussein

(continued on page 2)

Mark Johnson/The Collegian

The inside scoop: Columnist Jack Anderson reveals several goals of Operation Desert Storm that have been hidden from the public.

by Robb Frederick
The Collegian

Back in November, the reality of Operation Desert Storm was still in the distant future for most Behrend students.

But for Daniel Maille, a history major, the Persian Gulf crisis became quite real.

While most students settled down for a relaxing Thanksgiving dinner, Maille was ordered to start packing for Saudi Arabia.

But Daniel Maille is not alone.

Six other Behrend students were called to the Persian Gulf before the end of last semester, and they have been joined by five additional students this semester.

The following students have taken either a military withdrawal or a military leave of absence from the College: Maille, William Adams, non-degree,

(continued on page 3)

Inside
The Collegian
this week:

News

Page 3...
Lilley responds to Gannon criticisms

Opinion

Page 5...
New columnist hits the Op/Ed
page

Entertainment

Page 9...
Sting releases an emotional,
intimate LP

Sports

Page 12...
Women's hoops
in three game slide