

Drive to benefit local bank
a great success...page 3

Check out the new Craighead video ratings...page 6

Lady Lions caught in point
shaving scandal...page 7

Our Motto: "Never let the truth stand in the way of a good story"

The Collision

"Where Fact and Fiction meet head on"

Thursday, April 2, 1992

This is a joke, damnit

No. 007

JUN 20 2001

BEHREND COLLEGE
LIBRARY

Party On

Lilley, Shields enjoy fantasy
holiday at student expense

Port Ajuti-On-The-Bay, Jamaica -- Penn State-Behrend's Provost and Dean John Lilley and some of his key administrators were discovered at this resort city three days ago, apparently paying for the junket out of student funds.

The administrators were seen living it up at their beachfront condo with leaders from a local nunnery and members of petting zoo.

"What we've been seeing is most disturbing," said next door neighbor Axel Rose. "They're morally bankrupt -- even by my standards."

Rose said Lilley and Co. were prone to loud, raucous parties involving strange party favors. "One night they wheeled in this huge pot pie, big enough to fit three or four people in," said Rose. "All of the sudden the pie burst open and these nuns popped out. The only things they were wearing were rosary beads and those head dohickies. I couldn't believe it."

Lilley in particular seems to be having a good time. Rose said Lilley used to jump naked in the wee hours of the morning, but a nasty fall and the ensuing abrasions made nude bungee jumping "too painful," said Rose. "The first time after the fall all you could hear was screaming, then a BOING, then screaming, then a BOING, etc."

(continued on page 1B)

Wish you were here: Behrend administrators are having a good time in Port Ajuti-On-The-Bay. Pictured here is Sister Agnes, David Shields. Dean Lilley, on the left, is bungee jumping off of the roof.
Bob Smedly/The Collision

Davis Deported

Government officials claim Commu
prof a dangerous terrorist

by Hugo Willington
The Collision

Last night Immigration and Naturalization officers, accompanied by Pennsylvania State Troopers, whisked Ursula Davis away from her home and out of the country under a heavy woolen blanket of security.

Davis, an assistant professor of communication here at Behrend, has been accused of heading a local terrorist ring -- conspiring, among other things, to install Lynden LaRoushe as the Supreme Leader of the United States.

"We think she is a very cunning and capable woman, even if she sounds like she's chewing on a sweat sock when she talks," said an FBI agent who asked not to be identified.

"We're still trying to assess how far their plans were developed and how much overtime we'll get for this job. By the way, is there a good bar in this hole-of-a-town?" added the Agent.

Authorities, who spoke to us on the condition of anonymity (this would be not for attribution, eh?), said Davis' ring was almost ready to implement their plan.

IMPORTANT

This is a joke. This is only a joke. In the case of an actual newspaper, you would have been notified by the media in your area. This joke has been made possible by that weekly campus rag, The Collegian, in cooperation with absolutely no local authorities. Next week we will return you to your regularly scheduled