

Election '92

I'm voting for Clinton because I'm voting against Bush. The Republicans have had it too long. But I don't agree with Clinton's views on abortion. Bush is just telling people what they want to hear.

I want Bush to win. Clinton looks like a liar and Perot doesn't know what's up. Clinton is telling each group of people what they want to hear... so Bush is the man.

So far I wouldn't vote for Bush because of the attitudes he has about women's rights. It should have been an issue...

Economic policies

Higher tariffs on imported goods is in question. Some think higher tariffs are necessary to protect jobs, while others fear they could raise prices and promote inefficient production. Suggestions include temporary tax credits for additional business investments, using defense savings to reduce the national deficit to ensure economic stability, and using defense savings to increase payments to governments which are in fiscal crisis.

Do you support the following?	More protective trade tariffs for U.S. goods	Tax credits for first time home purchase	Temporary tax credits for business investment	Using defense savings to reduce the federal deficit	Using defense savings to help local governments

Health Care

Proposals for dealing with the problems of providing adequate and cost-efficient health care include establishment of a national health care plan, or reform within the present system, including: tax credits to low-income people to purchase insurance, requiring businesses to provide insurances to all employees or help with government-financed plans (play or pay), government incentives to providers in medically underserved areas (MUAs), and rationing of services as to who will be eligible when care is extremely expensive or resources are limited.

Do you support the following?	A national government-run health care plan?	Tax credits to buy private health insurance?	"Play or pay" employer provided health care	Government support of services to MUAs	Setting criteria for rationing of health care resources
