environment."

Shields and Anzivino described the type of person they want as someone with a proven track record, who can generate sales, a marketing plan, who is willing and able to teach students the arts of radio communications, and would be able to run the station.

"We need someone who is competent enough to run the station in any type of situation, like when Fred (Anzivino) had the accident. It was unforeseen, and no one person could replace him."

Anzivino, who hadn't missed a day of work for 42 months before his accident, is not able to work full time now, and it has had repercussions on the station.

Shields described the position "It's temporary for now. We have an income goal for six months. If the person can reach this goal after six months, we keep him for another six months.

If he then reaches our one-year goal, we keep him. The person must be very flexible and is a unique person."

The ultimate goal is to make the station completely self-supporting, to take itself off of the University's budget, and become more localized. Anzivino said that the goal after three years is $100,000 per year to cover salaries and other costs.

Shields noted that the station makes 17 to 20 thousand dollars a year without an organized sales effort, and said "with an organized sales effort, we can make a LOT more."

Anzivino commented, "Local programming is definitely the thing for the future. The station would become a Behrend entity (not University)."

They hope to see the rep in action by the first of the year.
