Some night when you and your friends are just twiddling your thumbs, here's something new and exciting you may want to check out: "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" at Pittsburgh's Hollywood Theater.

The show takes place every Saturday night at midnight.

"The Rocky Horror Picture Show" started in 1973 in London as a stage play and is now considered "the queen of the cult movies."

The film starts with the "goody-two-shoes" couple, Brad and Janet (Barry Bostwick and Susan Sarandon), who get a flat tire on a stormy night and seek help at a nearby castle.

Inside, they meet the master of the house, Sweet Transvestite,

Frank N. Furter (Tim Curry), who is hosting a party to unveil his latest creation: the muscle-bound man "with blond hair and a tan."

Brad and Janet are taken captive in the bizarre castle. The plot grows more complex as Dr. Everett Scott arrives and the servants plot to take over.

At the Hollywood Theater, the actual film is only half of the "Rocky Horror Picture Show" experience.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce Players perform the show right in front of the screen. They use costumes, props, and homemade puppets as characters.

Audience participation is part of the "Rocky Horror Picture Show." Rice is thrown during a wedding scene and squirt guns are used to simulate rain. The audience shouts out crude and hilarious callbacks throughout the show.

Basically, it's just a big party! "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" is a whole new movie-going experience that's inexpensive too! (Only $1.50 with student ID.) The Hollywood Theater is located at 1449 Potomac Avenue, Dormont, PA (Phone 341-2800).
